

June 28, 2006

Dow Jones announces launch of The Wall Street Journal Office Network

CORPORATE IT UPDATE-(C) 1995-2006 M2 COMMUNICATIONS LTD

Dow Jones & Company (NYSE:DJ), a news publisher and news content provider, announced on Tuesday (27 June) the launch of The Wall Street Journal Office Network (The WSJ Office Network), a service that delivers business news, information and customized announcements to office buildings on flat-panel LCD screens

The WSJ Office Network has been developed by Office Media Network Inc (OMN) and provides building tenants and visitors with up-to-the-minute news from the Journal's main sections and market indexes, weather and scrolling breaking-news headlines. Building owners can also use the network as a medium to communicate important announcements to tenants regarding building-related events, maintenance and security.

The network is planned to be introduced first in top office buildings in New York, Los Angeles, Washington D.C. and Chicago in US. The network is then expected to expand its presence to additional cities in US over the next several months. According to the company, the introduction of The Wall Street Journal Office Network is consistent with its strategy of delivering news and information across multiple distribution channels.